

Jackson Kelly has decades of experience defending clients in asbestos-related claims. We have served as National Coordinating Counsel for several asbestos and silica defendants for almost twenty years, coordinating and managing thousands of cases across the country in a cost-effective manner. Our attorneys have also served as general defense coordinating counsel in asbestos-related litigation in West Virginia for many years.

Our attorneys conduct internal investigations, identify and present company witnesses, and locate and prepare expert witnesses. As a result of extensive experience in managing this type of work, we provide our clients with analyses and advice concerning trends, issues, and risk assessments, as well as strategies and best practices for litigation.
